

Invitation to join the Hawke's Bay Branch of the Royal Society of New Zealand Inc.

The Royal Society of New Zealand (RSNZ) is an independent statutory body incorporating the National Academy of Science and Technology and a constituency of scientific and technological societies, regional societies, Fellows and individual Members.

RSNZ advances and promotes science and technology in New Zealand, recognises and encourages excellence in research, supports education, and publishes scientific journals, reports and educational resources. It administers research grants, fellowships, awards and prizes. Visit the Royal Society of New Zealand web site at: www.royalsociety.org.nz.

The Hawke's Bay Branch of the Royal Society of New Zealand is one of the regional societies of RSNZ. The branch is active in the advancement of science and the public understanding of science, particularly through the delivery of lectures to members and the general public of Hawke's Bay. From time to time it also assists other science promotion activities and maintenance of facilities relevant to its aims. Visit the Hawke's Bay branch web site at: <http://hawkesbay.rsnzbranch.org.nz/>.
